

Parent Tips

How many times have you asked your child what he/she did at school only to be answered with "Nothing!"? Don't accept that response. Every day at school adds to your child's educational experience. Try asking questions about your child's favorite subject or activity. Bring in the previous night's homework and ask about the skills they worked on and how they were addressed in class. Talk and listen. You will find that "nothing" can be a lot! This will help your child build crucial comprehension skills and forming a link between school and home.